'Arthur' author to visit with Iowa students using ICN

Students throughout Iowa in Kindergarten through fourth grade can interact in a one-of-a-kind event with the creator, author, and illustrator of the books and the PBS program "Arthur." Marc Brown is visiting Iowa to speak with students and answer their questions.

Iowa Public Television (IPTV) in collaboration with the University of Northern Iowa's Price Lab School, and the Iowa Communications Network (ICN) proudly present Meet "Arthur" Creator, Marc Brown on Thursday, April 14, from 12:30 p.m. to 1:30 p.m. through an ICN and IPTV K-12 Connections special event.

Interested participants can ask Marc Brown questions LIVE during the session by submitting their questions prior to the event to Abby Brown at abby@iptv.org by Friday, April 8. IPTV will choose ten unique questions and will notify the ten 'interactive sites' by email.

Teachers won't want to miss out on this great opportunity for your students to interact with the author of "Arthur". Participants can also watch the session by signing up as a 'view-only' site. Register by today, for this session by going to www.iptv.org/iowa_database/cal-default.cfm and click on the session title. K-12 Connections sessions are provided at no cost by IPTV in collaboration with the ICN to PK-12 students and the adults working with or on behalf of PK-12 students in Iowa.

The ICN, a State of Iowa agency, makes it possible for instructors and learners to participate in interactive learning opportunities in a cost-effective, efficient, and creative way. While providing support and resources for educators and students, ICN and IPTV are committed to the continued enhancement of distance learning.
